“What?” blurted out Auntie Candy, hardly containing her surprise. “You mean you’ve never heard of the Seven Wonders of the World? Well, it’s a list of the seven greatest architectural feats of the ancient world.” “That’s it! Our next expedition! Let’s go!” cried Lenny. Dorian, who was still browsing the internet, peered at everyone over his tablet. “Incredible,” he said. “In 2007 a new list was announced: the Wonders of the Modern World, which were constructed much later. It included 21 sites on five continents.” “So which ones will you visit?” asked Auntie Candy. “We could see eight of them,” proposed Dorian. “The Coliseum in Rome, Stonehenge in England, the Great Wall of China, the Eiffel Tower in Paris, the basilica of Saint Peter in Rome, Timbuktu in Mali, the Hagia Sophia in Istanbul and the Taj Mahal in India.” “Let’s get going! The wonders of the ancient and modern world await!” cried Penny. “I can’t wait to see them with my own eyes!” This is an exceptional book that appeals to both children and parents, inviting them to explore, learn and colour together.
