DESCRIPTION: Henderson articulates a powerful new strategy that goes to the root of environmental problems: the foundations of the economy. Specific changes to the incentive structure of markets would create a Green Economic Environment which would make it more profitable for businesses and consumers to go green and make the massive power of markets work for the environment instead of against it. Much more powerful and comprehensive than cap-and-trade, Henderson's strategy deals with global warming, resource depletion, contaminants, recycling, transportation....
